

SubscribePast IssuesTranslate ▼

View this email in your browser

Sunday's Scrips

A Monthly Newsletter

December: A month of the best kind of chaos

I'm glad you're here and hope you'll forward this to people who may enjoy it as well.

Whatcha Up To?

- My very first publication ever is now live! And I'm officially an internationally published writer swoon (More Below)
- I have collected forty-five (45) rejections in my #100RejectionsChallenge and five (5) acceptances, and I have forty-one (41) pieces Submitted
- I'm officially in massive re-write/edit mode of my manuscript and aside from breaks for general holiday cheer, I've gone into my cave and don't know when I'll return

What about you? What are your plans for December?

Bear Paw Arts Journal

My first ever publication as an adult is now live with the Montana-based Bear Paw Arts Journal. This is their inaugural issue and I'm so excited to be a part of it. Please enjoy my micro-memoir piece, Growing Love.

I also had three flash creative nonfiction pieces published in the current issue, Issue 10, of Panorama, a UK-based journal, that you can view here:

6 a.m. in California

Love in an R.V.

Cheating Myself

November Timed Writing Prompt Winner: JANET HILL

"Pretty good odds for living"

I'm totally and uncomfortably aware that my odds for living several more years outweigh those of people of all ages in some other parts of the world. If I were in Gaza, for example. I would be preparing to die. If I were in Syria, the same. How about an Argentine mother, fleeing north in an effort to save her babies from horrendous suffering and starvation? Every step of the journey is hazardous, and perhaps the most threatening is when almost there, at the bordercrossing into the United States with the opposite of a welcoming asylum? No here I am in the middle of a free country, living the dream, with no one bothering me, my husband or children. I'd be free if not for the compassion I feel for the earthquake victims, the victims of war, the downtrodden, starving, children around the world, some without even clean water to drink. I don't feel free. I feel that if I can't help, what is the use of my odds for living?

Hill writes from her rural Montana home which she shares with her husband, two cats, and two ponies. She writes for the joy of writing as she learns about life and herself through the characters in her novels and in the random poetry she occasionally pens. www.janetmuirheadhill.com

December Timed Writing Prompt Available Now!

Want a chance to have your work featured on my website, social media, and Patreon accounts? Become a supporter and you'll have access to my monthly timed writing prompt. Send me your unedited, timed writing response for your chance to be featured!

Become a Supporter

Thank you for all your support. I appreciate you.

Copyright (C) 2023 Sunday Dutro. All rights reserved.

Our mailing address is:

Want to change how you receive these emails?

You can update your preferences or unsubscribe

